‘Introduction Meeting’ of Melbourne-based Nepali Post-graduate students

18 April, 2013

An ‘introduction meeting’ of Melbourne based Nepali Post-graduate students with the Honorary Consular General of Victoria was held at the Nepalese consular General’s office. The meeting was initiated by Melbourne University Nepalese Students’ Society.

Post-graduate students from The University of Melbourne, RMIT University and La-trobe University attended the meeting. Meeting began with students appraising the Consular General with their respective field of study and areas of interests. Students expressed their interests in collaborating with wider Nepalese communities living in Victoria and discussed possible areas where Post-graduate students, Consulate and wider Nepalese community can have potential collaborations.

The Consular General expressed happiness for the proactive approach of the students and advised some important areas where students can collaborate. Universities being place where new ideas generated and nurtured students should capitalize this opportunity to initiate intellectual debating and discussing of ideas by organizing activities including, but not limited to, talk programs, lectures, and publishing newsletters. He hoped an active participation of students in future programs that the Nepalese Consulate and other Nepali organizations regularly organize.
